

Bonnie Schroeder – Now a Published Author

Mending Dreams, Published by Champlain Avenue Books

After many years of hard work and many attempts, Bonnie just received some exciting news - a publisher has accepted, published, and released her new book, Mending Dreams.

Bonnie was a long time Union Oil employee in the Corporate Human Resources department. She served the company at Unocal Center in Los Angeles and at the former Research Center in Brea.

After retiring from Unocal, Bonnie focused on writing and pursuing publication of her fiction. Among her published short stories are "The Black Dog," "The Go-Between," "What's in a Name?" and "A Losing Game." Mending Dreams is her first published novel, but she has more in the pipeline.

Bonnie's new book is available online and by special order at many brick and mortar bookstores too. If you are interested, you can download the first chapter for free on Bonnie's website: www.bonnieschroederbooks.com. If the story grabs you, there are links on the website for places where her book can be purchased. Although Bonnie's book is currently available only in paperback and e-book formats, a hardcover edition is in the works too.
